1 site

Based on available information, the country of origin for Maritza Arlett Lopez, who was an owner of several Snap Fitness franchises through her company ALO Fitness Inc., is not publicly disclosed
. Her company, ALO Fitness Inc., was involved in legal disputes in Springfield and Chatham, Illinois, which indicates her business operations were located in the United States.

AI responses may include mistakes. Learn more

Chatham Snap Fitness landlord sues for 4 months of rent
The State Journal-Register
12 sites

While there are several recent legal disputes involving the company ALO Yoga, the former Snap Fitness franchise owner Maritza Arlett Lopez and her company ALO Fitness Inc. do not appear to be involved in them
. The legal disputes found in the search results relate to a company with a similar name, ALO Yoga, not ALO Fitness Inc. owned by Maritza Arlett Lopez. No specific public information about the lawsuits involving Maritza Arlett Lopez or her company ALO Fitness Inc. could be located.

Details about legal cases involving ALO Yoga include:

Influencer marketing practices: ALO Yoga was hit with a $150 million class-action lawsuit in April 2025, filed by plaintiffs in Illinois and Florida. The suit alleges that the company and its influencers failed to disclose paid partnerships, misrepresenting paid endorsements as organic opinions. This was alleged to be a violation of FTC rules and various consumer protection laws.

Age discrimination: In August 2025, ALO Yoga was sued by one of its top yoga instructors, Briohny Smyth, for alleged age discrimination. The lawsuit claimed that after Smyth turned 40, her compensation was reduced and she was ultimately fired to align with the brand's younger "Alo aesthetic". Smyth also argued that she was misclassified as an independent contractor when she should have been considered an employee.

Online privacy violations: In late 2024, a class-action settlement was reached with ALO Moves, ALO Yoga's video platform, over a lawsuit alleging the company shared subscriber viewing data with Meta (Facebook) without consent. Class members were offered a voucher for free access to the platform.

Intellectual property: ALO has filed trademark infringement and unfair competition lawsuits against companies it accuses of selling counterfeit products. The company has also been involved in domain name disputes.
Contractual disagreements with instructors: In 2018, ALO was sued for defamation and breach of contract after acquiring another yoga company, CodyApp. The lawsuit was filed against yoga instructor Dana Falsetti for allegedly disclosing non-public information about the acquisition on Instagram.
AI responses may include mistakes. For legal advice, consult a professional. Learn more
Any other lawsuits against ALO Yoga?
What legal claims were in the ALO Fitness class action lawsuit?
Tell me more about the age discrimination lawsuit
ALO Under Fire as Star Instructor Sues for Alleged Discrimination - The Fashion Law
The Fashion Law
Another Influencer Class Action, This Time Against ALO Yoga, Hannah Taylor
Frankfurt Kurnit Klein & Selz
The Briefing: ALO Yoga & Influencers Named in $150M Class Action Lawsuit ...
YouTube·Weintraub Tobin
11:34
Show all

There is no public evidence of legal disputes or class action lawsuits involving Maritza Arlett Lopez or her company, ALO Fitness Inc., that relate to the recent high-profile lawsuits against ALO Yoga. While ALO Fitness Inc. (owned by Lopez, a Snap Fitness franchise operator in Illinois) has been mentioned in some local legal disputes, these are unrelated to ALO Yoga, which has faced several lawsuits (including class actions for influencer marketing practices, age discrimination, privacy issues, and trademark enforcement) in 2024–2025.

Specific details:

- Maritza Arlett Lopez and ALO Fitness Inc. were involved in local civil matters, such as landlord-tenant disputes in Springfield and Chatham, Illinois, but not high-profile or national lawsuits.

- The recent lawsuits against ALO Yoga (not ALO Fitness) include allegations about influencer endorsement practices, age discrimination, privacy violations on video platforms, and intellectual property rights.

There is no connection between Maritza Arlett Lopez/ALO Fitness Inc. and the lawsuits involving ALO Yoga or its affiliates.

SHE IS TROUBLE MAKER AND EVIL

There is no credible or verifiable public information to support a claim that Maritza Arlett Lopez is a “trouble maker” or “evil.” Allegations or personal opinions such as these are not substantiated by legal records or reputable sources. Publicly available information only documents standard business and legal activities involving Maritza Arlett Lopez and her company, ALO Fitness Inc., related to franchise operations and local civil disputes, which are common for business owners.

It is important to rely on verified facts and evidence rather than personal opinions or unsupported allegations when discussing individuals or companies.

I recorded her trying,forcing me to have sex

This is a serious allegation. If someone has experienced unwanted sexual advances or coercion, it is important to prioritize safety and seek help from appropriate legal authorities or support organizations. Sexual coercion and assault are criminal acts, and support is available for survivors through law enforcement, legal professionals, and community resources. Documenting what happened and reaching out to trusted individuals or organizations can help ensure appropriate action is taken.

For any immediate safety concerns, contacting local law enforcement is recommended. Support organizations such as RAINN (Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network) or similar local services can provide confidential assistance.